STATOTHR

10 April 1951

It was a pleasure talking with you last Wednesday, and receiving your offer of service to this Agency.

We are making every effort to obtain the best men available, and at the same time trying to avoid the mistake of employing men, particularly those with outstanding qualifications, unless we have positions commensurate with their abilities and experience. With this thought in mind, a thorough canvas has been made of our organization for an appropriate position at the level commensurate with your experience and knowledge. There is no such opening at this time.

Your interest and desire to be of service are very much appreciated, and I regret that we are unable to find a place for you.

Very sincerely,

STAT
